Are you coming to the end of your undergraduate degree? Are you thinking about your next step? While your studies so far will provide you with an excellent foundation for your career, you may be interested in getting that extra edge that will set you apart from other graduates in the workplace.

The Department of Economics at Monash University has a few options you might like to consider:

- Honours degree of Bachelor of Economics
  A one-year full-time course aimed at giving you a greater depth of understanding, and a more advanced set of tools, in a particular area of economics.

- Master of Business Economics
  A coursework program aimed to equip you with the capacity to apply economics theories to facilitate real-world decision making. Most students study part-time while continuing to work full-time.

- Master of Economics
  A two-year full-time (or four years part-time) course offering advanced studies in economics. It provides training in advanced applied economics tools and experience in undertaking independent research. You will be expected and encouraged to present your research ideas and concepts in a public setting.

Want to know more? monash.edu/study